2 By clicking on the link, participants would be directed to either download the ZOOM software through a very straightforward process or access it simply through their browser. We can provide tutorials as well, but honestly they've made it as easy as possible for people to use.

3 We would open the meeting about 15 minutes prior to the start of the quiz to ensure people were signing in and working out any issues with sound, etc. before the start time of the quiz.

4 Once in the meeting, participants would see a similar screen to the one below, where the host's video would be highlighted.

Chat can be accessed through this icon

5 Once everyone was in the meeting and accounted for, we would begin the quiz with an explanation of the process, the rules, the format, etc, before launching into the questions, which would be asked both out loud by the host, as well as being posted into the meeting chat (as seen to the right of the host's video in the picture above). The chat which would be reserved solely for quiz questions, but participants can always send the host a direct message if need be.

At this point, we would alternate asking questions and giving participants the time to discuss the questions with their teammates before moving into the next question. This would be done either through a separate chat (Skype, WhatsApp, etc.) organized by the participants themselves or through Zoom's own "breakout rooms" feature. With breakout rooms, we assign participants into teams, and the host then "breaks" the group off into their smaller groups. Participants are then able to speak solely and privately with their other teammates for a few minutes before being brought back to the main meeting space.

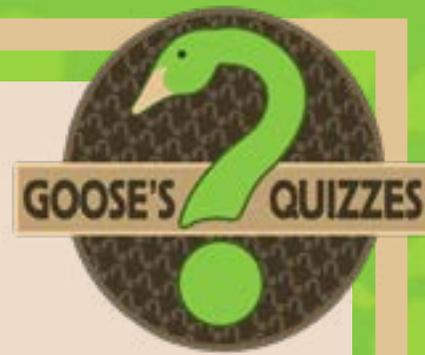

We can discuss which option works best for your group, as it depends on numbers and coherence of the group. You can also choose to pre-assign teams or randomize them.

A link to the Google Form answer sheet would be provided prior to the event, as well as in the Zoom chat. Teams would designate one person to submit the form for their team after each round.

The graphic shows a sample quiz form with a green header. The header contains the text "GOOSE IN YOUR HOOSE!" in a bold, green, sans-serif font, and a green goose head in profile. Below the header, the form is titled "Sample Quiz Form". It is divided into sections for "ROUND 1", "Question 1", "Your answer", "Question 2", and "Your answer".

8 Marking would normally be conducted between rounds, a downtime which would allow people to chat as a group, go to the bathroom, etc. Answers would be revealed before beginning the next round of questions

9 After the final round, the host announces the final scores and then can provide you with the opportunity to continue talking with your group after they leave the meeting, by designating you a host. However, this option is dependent on us not having a quiz right after yours.

10 The 4 rounds of quizzing would last around 2 hours, and the round category (out of Film & TV, Food & Drink, Sports & Games, Science & Nature, Geography, Art & Literature, History) are chosen by popular vote after each round. We can also add or switch in picture rounds, music rounds or customised rounds for an extra £15 each.
